Report HW 4

Calling geneStr.count('ata') would take geneStr and convert it into an array of individual characters like such:

['a','a','t','g',…,'c']

You would never find 'ata' or any length three sub-string in this array. By using a dictionary, you can assign a key to every codon to be able to easily tally them as they appear.